

The annual tulip festival in Ottawa is a result of Canada's role in hosting the Dutch Royal Family and liberating the Netherlands during World War II. As a show of friendship between the two countries, Ottawa receives 20 000 bulbs every year which helps usher in summer in the Capital.

