

Arctic Wolf: Smaller and lighter than the southern wolves, they cover much of Canada's Arctic. Individually or in packs, wolves use strategy to take down the swift caribou, a main source of food. Once shot on sight, the wolf is now left largely to its own, and has been a great source of legend.

