Canadian Pacific Railroad: On November 7, 1885 the Canadian Pacific Railway set the last spike in its construction. The first trans-continental railway train chugged through Saskatchewan in 1886. Since then this railroad has brought Canada together, and acted as a gateway to the Pacific Ocean.