

Lobster fishing is a big deal in Newfoundland and Labrador. When a lobster trap is set, it sits on the bottom of the sea. A long rope with a buoy attached marks the spot where the trap is. The buoys are brightly coloured so that they can be identified by the owner and found easily.

