

Newfoundland and Labrador's capital, St. John's is known for its colourful "jellybean" row houses. These dwellings were built after a great fire in the late 1800's as temporary homes. Legend says that the bright colours allowed sailors returning home from sea to see their houses in the fog.

