

Plains of Abraham: The plateau was the scene of a battle (Sept. 13, 1759) between the French and the British which secured Quebec for the British. Named for Abraham Martin, a ship's pilot who formerly owned part of the land, the plains are now a national historic park.

